clrmamepro Platforms: WindowsATHENS (Reuters) - Greek Prime Minister Alexis Tsipras will seek to preserve progress in talks with international lenders by proposing a debt deal that does not lead to any cuts in wages and pensions and by holding referendums on his economic reforms, a senior Greek government official said. REUTERS/Hannibal Hanschke/File Photo Tsipras, who was sworn in on Monday, gave his new cabinet a brief to begin discussions with international creditors on Monday in Brussels and is expected to meet President Barack Obama at the White House in Washington this week. "The problem is that the government's social platform would be undermined by our reform. The result would be a return to the social quagmire we've been exiting from." The official said no one in the government was "kidding" themselves, however. "These are the consequences of our policy: changes to pensions and the minimum wage which are increasing the burden on the lowest earners and the middle class," he said, requesting anonymity because he was not authorised to speak to the media.
